DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, first paragraph, as failing to comply with the written description requirement. The claim(s) contains subject matter which was not described in the specification in such a way as to reasonably convey to one skilled in the relevant art that the inventor(s), at the time the application was filed, had possession of the claimed invention. Lines 13-15 of claim 1 describe the ribs not having an increase in height from the proximal to the distal end relative to a longitudinal axis of the shaft. However, the Applicant has not adequately shown in the specification and the drawings that the ribs do not have an increase in their longitudinal height.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-5 and 7-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bohn (U.S. Pat. No. 5,507,833) in view of Webb, Jr. et al. (U.S. Pat. No. 4,714,470). Bohn discloses the shaft with a tapering, substantially rectangular, core cross-section (please see Figures 5, 6); longitudinal ribs (52) on the lateral and medians sides of the distal portion of the shaft, where the height of the ribs increases continuously relative to the shaft core surface from a proximal to a distal direction, and where the height of the ribs does not increase relative to a longitudinal axis of the shaft (please see Figure 5-9). Bohn does not disclose edge ribs on the lateral corners of the shaft's rectangular cross-section. Webb, Jr. et al. teaches hip implant with edge ribs on the lateral corners of the shaft's rectangular cross-section in Figures 1 and 6 and in col. 5, line 63 through col. 4, line 34 for the purpose of providing additional stability to the prosthesis when it is implanted. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made, to use edge ribs on the implant in order to provide additional stability to the prosthesis when it is implanted.

Regarding the claim language discussing the axis ratio and rib heights, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to use the claimed values, since it has held that discovering an optimum value of a result effective variable involves only routine skill in the art. In re Boesch, 617 F.2d 272, 205 USPQ 215 (CCPA 1980).

Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Bohn in view of Webb, Jr. et al., in further view of Blanquaert (U.S. Pat. No. 4,495,664). Bohn, as modified by Webb, Jr. et al., discloses the invention substantially as claimed, however, they do not disclose the ribs having roughened surfaces. Blanquaert teaches a hip prosthesis with roughened ribs in col. 2, lines 3-13 for the purpose of promoting bone regrowth. Therefore it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made, to have roughened surfaces on the ribs in order to promote bone regrowth.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 1-11 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
